Presents

ON CHESIL BEACH

by Ian McEwan

"While one heard of wealthier people going in for psychoanalysis, it was not yet customary to regard oneself ... as an enigma, as an exercise in narrative history, or as a problem waiting to be solved."

- "On Chesil Beach"

"It is shaming, sometimes, how the body will not or cannot lie about emotions."

Practice Gap/Need:

The consideration of the shame affect in clinical practice is often neglected in psychoanalytic education.

Upon Completion of this activity:

1. Participants will identify the shame affect and the dynamics of shame.
2. Participants will be able to discuss the dynamics of verbal and nonverbal signs of shame.
3. Participants will discuss how concern about exposure connects with signs of humiliation or disgust in their clinical practices.
